VIRGINIA LEAGUE

| Here the state of the st

in attempting to cross the pan on the same hit.

From then until the sixth there was not a chance, only one man getting as far as second. In the sixth, after a conference, Wallace came up strong and hit safe to left. McCabe duplicated in centre, but, sad as it is to relate, all of the mighty timber wielders who followed fell down dismally, and Wallace and McCabe rested where they were. Egan popped one to left; Martin did the same to second, and Mattis tapped one in the air to right.

The final spurt came in the last inning, when we managed to shove another across. Martin hit, went to third on a wild heave from Poole, and scored as Cowan was going out, second to first. Mattis in the meantime had struck out. Sull'un walked, but Barker popped to second, and it was over. Poole pitched a great game of ball and was never worried. He let up toward the finish, but whenever there was a chance of damage being done put the lid down and sat on it. The score:
